

The different versions of Google

Last Updated Sunday, 18 November 2012

Google offers different versions of its search engine: Google, Google Scholar, Google Images , etc. Each of its versions has its own specificities, and its uses

Google

The most widely known of the search engines. Powerful, rapid. This version offers a basic search facility and an advanced search facility.

Google Scholar

Launched in November 2004, the academic version of Google. Google Scholar enables searches to be performed on university works: articles reviewed by reading panels, theses, books, analytical resumes and articles. To our knowledge Google has never specified the exact sources of Google Scholar. To learn more, read on the Google site About Google Scholar.
